

NTR 553 : Epidemiology for the Health Sciences

This course introduces the student to the basic principles and methods of epidemiology with a focus on nutrition. These include types of epidemiologic studies, choices in study design, measures of disease frequency and association and application to public health.