

PAD 574 : Economic Principles & Analysis

A course designed to demonstrate how economics may be understood and used by the public administrator. The focus will be the application of economics to such public and third sector areas as human resources, manpower, health, mental health, developmental disabilities, social services, and urban problems. The theory underlying cost-benefit and input-output analysis will also be discussed.